

Wild Things

Sculpture lives among the wildlife at the Maine Audubon

Howling Wolf, 2010, steel, 60" x 70" x 36"

You won't find any wild caribou roaming the Gilsland Farm Audubon Center in Falmouth these days. But for the past six months and until May 2011, an exhibition of animal sculpture by artist Wendy Klemperer offers visitors an opportunity to witness elk, wolves, mountain lion, lynx, and deer in plain sight.

The pieces of sculpture are part of an exhibition curated by June LaCombe called Re-Imagined. Klemperer uses recycled materials pulled from industrial salvage piles, which gives the animals a rough visceral quality. Says LaCombe, "Her sculpture invites us to become more aware of our relationship with wildlife and the land we share"—making it a perfect fit for Maine Audubon, where real animals coexist with their sculptural counterparts. Klemperer's rendition of these mammals takes on a mythical quality—many feature oversized proportions and an exaggerated ferocity. Larger-than-life features and abstracted antlers and racks reflect the place the wild holds in our imaginations, according to LaCombe.

“The work uses the body language of animals to express a feeling or state of being, with motion conveying emotion.”

Walking Elk, 2004, steel, 93" x 108" x 44"

Running Fox, 2010, steel, 32" 48" x 14"

Catamount, 2009, steel, 60" x 120" x 56"

Fenrir (Omar), 2009, steel, 52" x 100 x 36"

Klemperer's observations of animals and their behavior come through her sketches in steel. Born in 1958, she attended the Skowhegan School of Painting and Sculpture in 1984. She received a BFA in sculpture from Pratt Institute in 1983 and a BA from Harvard-Radcliffe in biochemistry in 1980. She has sculpture in private and public collections throughout the country and does commissioned work from herds of deer to small tabletop pieces.

"I'm interested in how animals, being for the most part nonverbal, express themselves through body language," she explains. "Bodies change shape depending on what they are doing—there is no one shape that means cat: it could be coiled like a spring, or stretched like an elastic band. I try to convey motion through a network of steel lines, drawing and redrawing the form. The work uses the body language of animals to express a feeling or state of being, with motion conveying emotion." MH+D

RE-IMAGINED RUNS UNTIL MAY 2011 AT THE GILSLAND FARM AUDUBON CENTER IN FALMOUTH. THE SCULPTURES ARE FOR SALE, WITH A PERCENTAGE OF SALES BENEFITTING MAINE AUDUBON.

FOR MORE INFORMATION, PLEASE VISIT JUNELACOMBESCULPTURE.COM OR MAINEAUDUBON.ORG.

For more information, see Resources on page 81.

PO Box 871, Portland, ME 04104
www.dalebraggbuilders.com

- Fireplaces
- Granite countertops and sinks
- Landscape and architectural stonework
- Quarrying and raw stone
- A wide selection of Maine granite and imported stone

Photography: Brian Vanden Brink

P.O. Box 15, US Route 1
 Orland, ME 04472
 207.469.6331

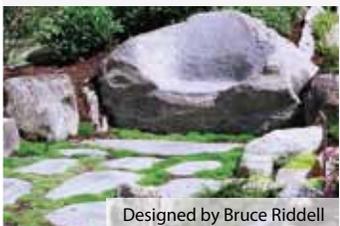

FRESHWATER STONE

The Art of Maine Stone

www.freshwaterstone.com

Coastal Maine Botanical Gardens

Designed by Bruce Riddell

Designed by Bruce Riddell

JORGENSEN LANDSCAPING, INC.

A Maine Owned Cooperation
 Mark Jorgensen, President
 Bath, Maine | 207-443-9306

If you need to climb it, we can get you there.

Fabrication
 Stair & Handrail
 Structural Steel
 Misc. Metals

Spiral Staircases

www.accidental anomalies.com
 (207) 966-2107

www.mainespiralstair.com
 (207) 966-1039

- Turner, Maine -

Maine Spiral Staircase Corporation

Accidental Anomalies, Inc.